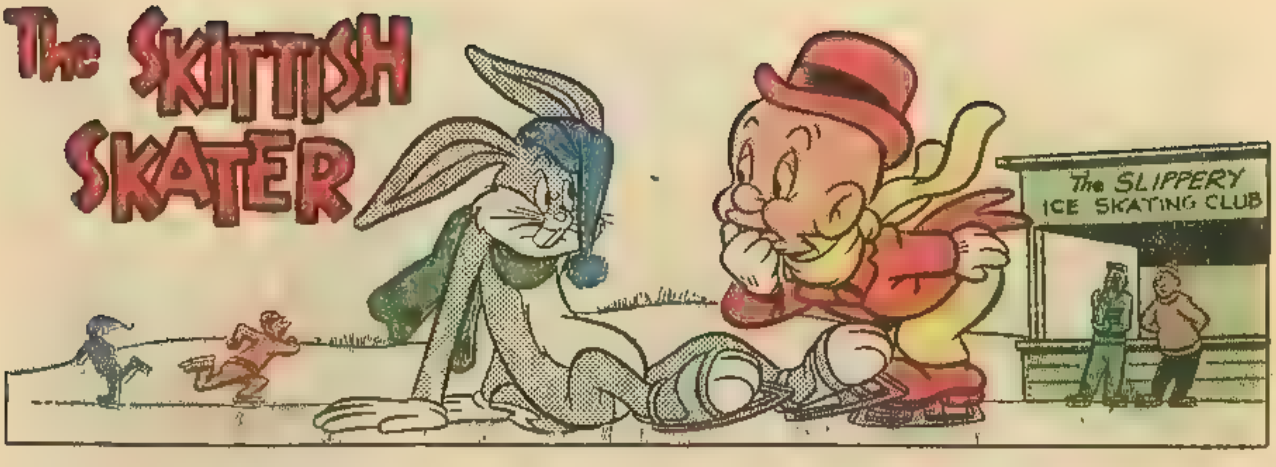
The SKITTISH SKATER



"A-skating we will go, a-skating we will go!" sang Bugs Bunny loudly, as he burst into Elmer Fudd's house. "Get your skates, Fuddsy! Skaters Pond is frozen solid!"

"Wait, you cwazy wabbit!" Elmer cried. "You know that I can't skate!"

"Ha! You're speaking to the best skating teacher in town!" bragged Bugs, airily. "Besides, THE SLIPPERY ICE SKATING CLUB is taking in the best skaters as members today. I expect to be one of them!"

"Oh, I know I'll wegwet this," Elmer sighed. But he put on his heavy red jacket and picked up the new skates that had been given him for Christmas.

When Bugs and Elmer arrived at Skaters Pond, many skaters were gliding gracefully over the glittering ice.

"It makes me nervous to learn in front of so many experts," protested Elmer.

"Phoosh!" exclaimed Bugs. "I'll have you skating rings around them in no time."

As soon as they had put on their skates, Bugs pulled Elmer out onto the smooth ice with a showy swoop.

"Just glide along!" Bugs instructed Elmer. "Glide, I said!" But Elmer bumped into Bugs, and down Bugs went — WHAM!

"I'm sowwy, Bugs!" cried Elmer. Then he giggled helplessly as he helped Bugs to his feet, and added, "I never did see anyone fall so gwacefully!"

"Well," Bugs grunted, breathlessly, "that showed you how not to skate!"

Once more Bugs led Elmer out onto the ice in a fancy glide That is, Elmer glided like a swan while Bugs stumbled and bobbed along, holding Elmer up.

Then a skater skimmed lightly around and stopped beside them. "What's your name?" he asked Elmer.

"I'm Elmer Fudd!" replied Elmer in a jaunty voice.

"We are considering you as a member of our Skating Club," the skater declared.

"Hey, wait!" gasped Bugs, completely stunned. "I'm Bugs Bunny. I'm teaching Elmer how to skate!"

"Hmm!" the skater muttered. "You'd better give yourself a few lessons, too!"

Sputtering angrily, Bugs shoved Elmer out ahead of him and let him go. Arms outflung, Elmer wobbled back and forth in an effort to keep his balance. Then as a long line of skaters zoomed past, Elmer clutched the hand of the last skater in relief.

"Oh, Fuddsy!" groaned Bugs. "They're going to CRACK-THE-WHIP, and you're IT!"

Around and around, the line of skaters went like a merry-go-round on ice, faster and faster. At last Elmer went snapping off the end of the line, shooting into a series of whirls and leaps that sent him spinning dizzily one moment and flying through the air, the next!

At last, he ended with a twirl in front of the Skating Club's official stand, just as Bugs flashed up, anxiously.

"What marvelous figure skating!" the Club's President declared, admiringly. "We want you to join our Club, Elmer!"

Bugs turned sadly away, but quickly the President added, "And you, too, Bugs, for the expert teaching you gave Elmer!"

"And Bugs is the best skating teacher in the world!" exclaimed Elmer, proudly.

Bugs nodded his head with a grin, as he agreed heartily with the praise that was being heaped upon him!

BOYS WHO KNOW MODEL TRAINS—AND THE DIFFERENCES BETWEEN THEM—PICK AMERICAN FLYER. HERE'S WHY...

When you're at the controls of an American Flyer train, it's almost like riding in the cab of a real locomotive. That's because American Flyer trains are scale models of real locos and cars and run on two-rail (not three-rail) track.

REAL-TRAIN LOOKS
Actual scale models.

REAL-TRAIN SMOKE
Real smoke right from the boiler—choo-choo sound effects from the stack!

REAL-TRAIN POWER
Only American Flyer will pull so many cars, climb such steep grades.

REAL-TRAIN TRACK
Flat-top 2-rail track.
